Disclaimer: This report confirms that your trademark has been successfully filed with IPONZ and assigned an official application number. The filing process includes a comprehensive review of the IPONZ database to identify existing or pending marks that may present conflicts with your application. Identifying these conflicts at this stage is strongly recommended, as it provides insight into whether your mark (name, logo, phrase, etc.) can proceed smoothly through the examination process without objections or oppositions being raised. A thorough review of IPONZ records, related unregistered marks, online searches, and other relevant trademark data helps determine the likelihood of challenges during registration. While IPONZ has taken careful measures to ensure the completeness and accuracy of this search and filing report, it is important to recognize that conflicts are a common part of the process, and examiner assessments may vary. Data from official registers and other sources may also be subject to change, which can affect the outcome of the examination stage.

IPONZ Filing Process: -

This Filing and Search Report has been generated by IPONZ for your trademark application that has been successfully filed and assigned an official application number. During the filing process, IPONZ identified potential conflicts, which means your application is categorized as a conflict case. Despite this, the application has been formally accepted and will move forward under the assigned classifications.

Following submission, IPONZ typically takes around 3–4 months to examine the application. During this stage, an examiner will manually review the application to assess compliance with legal requirements and determine whether it can proceed to acceptance. The entire process—from filing to registration—may take approximately 7 to 13 months, depending on whether objections or oppositions are raised.
